Microsoft Windows XP, Microsoft Windows 2000, Microsoft Windows 98, Microsoft Windows 95.Q: How can I manage the start up and shutdown of a process in Windows ?? My company has a number of PCs that use long-polling for our primary web server. This works fine, except for the fact that the web server does not start/stop immediately. The main issue is that the primary web server stops responding when the machine has been idle for a while. The fix is to log off and log back on to the machine. In Windows XP, I would just use the Task Manager to kill the web server process. In Windows 7, the Task Manager does not work. If I kill the process via Task Manager, then I get an error when I try to start it again. What's the best way to manage this? A: HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE\SYSTEM\CurrentControlSet\Services\BroadcastService\Parameters should help. A: Kill the long-polling process (as in, tell it to exit gracefully). Get the PID of the process (in order to easily restart) Use the Sysinternals Procmon tool to figure out which PID belongs to the long-polling process (you can then send the rest of the command to that process using WinAPI tools). If you find another (long-polling) process, get the PID for that process and repeat the first step. If you need to restart the process while it is running, use the Sysinternals AutoIt utility to restart it: Otherwise, you're going to have to manually go through the list of processes and
