Several new features introduced in FIFA 22 allow players to take control of their game in a way that was previously only possible through third-party solutions. For example, hit-boxes are now tied to the actual player, so that it's possible to knock an opponent over if the player is close enough. Also, defenders are now able to "point" directly to the player in possession. FIFA 22 introduces various adjustments to the system of substitutions that was first introduced in FIFA 19. See the "Captivating Substitutions" and "Scrum Substitutions" sections in the Special Features section for more info. Special Features HyperMotion Technology: The HyperMotion Technology will be implemented in FIFA 22. While the FIFA universe is limited only by the imagination of game creators, the world of soccer is full of possibilities and a real-life environment. To bring this level of realism to FIFA 22, the 22 players who participated in the final minutes of the game against Brazil have been captured and motion captured to provide a foundation for gameplay. Although there is a limit to how much accurate data the game can present, the creators have ensured that the basic movement of players is accurately displayed, to give players a more lifelike environment to play in. Fully-Dedicated AI: FIFA 22 introduces a brand-new AI. The AI has been developed alongside the game creators, and as such has been carefully crafted to bring you the best in-game experience possible. All of the AI in FIFA 22 is unique, with updated AI logic to make your matches more exciting. Players will react more realistically to your tactics, and the game will display a greater variety of interceptions, and tackles. Several features are also being introduced that enable the AI to learn from its mistakes and provide a more challenging experience throughout the game. Read below for more information on how a few features of the AI can be affected by your gameplay style: Tactic Switch: The Tactic Switch element will be available in FIFA 22. This feature will allow AI players to learn from each other to adapt their tactics and create a balanced game. If your opponents use a particular tactic that you are familiar with, they will be able to learn from it and adapt their tactics to counter your play.
