===== Google Chrome Stop Updates is a handy and reliable solution for disabling the Auto Update feature of the Chrome browser. It's brought in the form of a REG file that needs to be run, then given permission to apply the new settings. Following this action, Chrome will no longer update itself automatically. Jeez. My mistake - I misread. I don't see any Google Chrome updated notification at all, and I honestly don't see any in Safari or Firefox either. What does "major content update" mean anyways? Edit: And to OP's question about why I didn't even see the update: I have Google Chrome set to always run in the background. If I set it to only run on startup, I will know about updates. It's just that I don't. Anyhow, it's been a long day so I'll probably be hitting the hay. Maybe I'll drop in tomorrow to find out what's been updated... _____ To view links or images in signatures your post count must be 10 or greater. You currently have 0 posts. After the update I only find the one mentioned in the original post. After the update the updated widget has changed. Now, when there is an auto-update, it displays the number of updates and offers the option to enable or disable automatic updates. It now asks you to authenticate before each update Thanks for posting the instructions. It just feels like such a little bit of improvement that I have to say I'm disappointed. I just updated my iPad with iOS 12.2.6 and I upgraded to the Grababe App to be able to use it on Apple Watch. I have used Google Chrome on my Mac for many years. Recently I was trying to use the new app on my Watch and it was frustrating because the app is pretty far away from what's on my Mac. I was thinking maybe I could transfer Chrome to my Watch. I tried to use wget or curl but both do not recognize my Watch. It all worked when I used WebKit but it's not what I need. I have some RTF files that I need to use on my Macbook and I tried to use the Mac ebook reader to open the files but it didn't support.rtf files. I need a client that will allow me to read the RTF files. I'm really not sure how to go about this. I will be in contact with a professional IT person when I have more information. If you know how to get this to work I would appreciate your help. How do I share a file, picture, video or link to you? You can easily share anything you
