The punch was featured on the show Top Chef this past season and Season 3 contestants were required to choose one of the following punch options in order to receive a $1,000 prize: white peach, white grape, blackberry strawberry and strawberry lemonade. The poll is so polarizing that even the show's host Padma Lakshmi couldn't decide. We saw her, along with fellow judges Tom Colicchio and Dorie Greenspan, take turns with voting for the one they chose. But choosing a favorite is impossible, there's too many characters. But can we get a spoiler alert and point out the obvious? Tom Colicchio chose the white peach. Dorie Greenspan chose the blackberry strawberry. And Padma chose the strawberry lemonade. This is the punch, according to kate spade new york. Whichever theme you select, the punch will be similar, a delicious blend of fruit and spirits, each region has its own twist. So if you're hosting a party this summer, put these cocktails in your guest's hands, and it'll make it so much easier to pay their tab. Can't wait for the finale to see which punch your loved ones choose? For the next five weeks, you can vote between one of these four delicious cocktails! John Kasich said he is not moving forward with a plan to require Medicaid recipients to work in order to get health care benefits. Kasich, who is also President Donald Trump's primary rival for the Republican presidential nomination, told reporters Sunday at a campaign stop in New Hampshire that he is no longer going to pursue the measure. "I was the only one who I saw that said we should do this," Kasich said. "I'm not going to be the person who picks up this pen." Kasich's plan had faced opposition from lawmakers, who said it could negatively impact Medicaid recipients' care. The Ohio Department of Medicaid says that 92% of Ohioans receiving Medicaid are working. "It's a perception that people have that the system is not affordable for the average person," Kasich said. "That's not true, it's a lie." Kasich called the debate over Medicaid work requirements a "subtle but important" shift in how Medicaid is governed. The governor was the first to propose work requirements in his state before changing course amid criticism.Roger Lee: $59 billion in secret tax cuts for big corporations By Roger Lee, Business reporter The Government yesterday passed through Parliament a bill which was aimed at partly filling a $
